3. Report of the President
   Presented by President Herbst

   This is the penultimate Senate meeting of the year.

   President Herbst returned from the Final Four, which was a great, but tough game. The athletes are terrific young women, who are great ambassadors for the University. Even the local Columbus newspapers were impressed with the poise of the women and how they represented us.

   She has been working along the same dimensions as prior. It is high budget season and CFO Scott Jordan is busy. Bills have been coming up. Several faculty have testified in the legislature. Senate Bill 536, An Act Concerning Entrepreneurship Initiatives at the University of Connecticut, is worrisome because it would change the mission of the University. UConn would become more of a technological, entrepreneurship, and innovation university. President Herbst, John Elliot, Radenka Maric, and Kazem Kazerounian testified against the bill today. The bill tries to compare UConn to places like MIT and Stanford, which have different budgetary situations. While well-intentioned, this is not what we are; it does not fit our mission. What is next is that bill would come out of committee; the question then is can we do some things in the bill; the next question is does it go to the floor or not. UConn is all for entrepreneurship and innovation, but the bill is prescriptive in what it wants us to do. For instance, four of the twelve Board of Trustees members would be entrepreneurs, there would be a Gen Ed requirement for entrepreneurship and innovation, and there would be a quasi-governmental organization that would dictate the goals of the University to be in line with entrepreneurship and innovation. We are going to work with the senator and others to boost entrepreneurship at UConn. There are some interesting things in the bill, but to build capacity in this area, most importantly, it takes money. We particularly need to bring on great faculty with great ideas. When President Herbst testified, she explained that we are a comprehensive research university, which does a lot more than STEM. We were presented with legislation just a few days ago.
Senator Wagner asked about the The Environment Metanoia, which he is co-chairing with John Clausen. Their hope is that this will be a semester long event that encourages individuals, towns, and the University to be leaders in renewable energy. This relates to social injustice. They are looking for the University to build out its environmental portfolio and he asked for news on that front.

President Herbst responded that UConn has done a lot of great things with sustainability. Scott Jordan shared that from the central energy plan, the University makes 95% of its electricity. We burn natural gas, which is very efficient. The steam is used multiple times, and its condensate is also used. 5% of the energy used system-wide (all campuses) is purchased from Eversource. The contract entered into last year stipulates that we buy all energy from renewable sources. We have engaged CES, an energy consultant, on next steps. CES previously worked with other universities, including URI and UMass Amherst, on renewable energy sources, including solar. A little tweak is that the environmental bureaucracy wants us to do more, but the procurement folks haven’t figured out how to buy it. It is a financial transaction with an energy producer. We are making a lot of headway, supportive of all these efforts, and hoping to see more on campus.

President Herbst asked Senator Wagner whether there are any Metanoia sessions about what we are doing at UConn.

Senator Wagner replied that the sessions were not necessarily about UConn, but they just got the go-ahead from the editor of the Daily Campus to publish about what we are doing here. There were 35 proposals approved for the Metanoia, and there are some energy issues addressed with those.

President Herbst asked about the schedule.

Senator Wagner stated that most activities will be concentrated in the week preceding Earth Day, starting the 16th. They are hoping Metanoia goes the whole semester. Speakers have come in already. Hosting multiple events is the best way to reach a lot of students. An email going out to all students tomorrow. This is an issue most undergraduates care about. They received a lot of proposals from undergrads.

Senator Beall stated that the news of the bill was a bit alarming. He encouraged President Herbst to tap into faculty widely across the University for support. We can all think of many examples of politicians trying to dictate to the University, and though this comes from good intentions and heart, we are on a bad road if the mission of the University is driven by a short sighted need for money and votes.

President Herbst responded that she thinks our response is in pretty good shape, but will absolutely tap into faculty, as needed. People can read the bill itself, which is long and hard to parse. Joann Lombardo and Gail Bysiewicz-Garber created a really nice document in which they parsed the bill, explaining why each piece is unworkable and problematic for the University. She will share this with Hedley Freake, who can send it out more widely. Today was a pretty good day and President Herbst thinks we can get to a place where there are some positive things we can do. There is no funding attached to the bill.
Senator von Hammerstein thanked the President for talking about hearing held this morning and sending information to the Senate Executive Committee late last week. The SEC, with Senator Caira as the main engine, wrote testimony over the weekend. Senator von Hammerstein asked where the bill is coming from. It came out of the blue, but was carefully written with detailed micromanagement of the University. Is there an impetus for the bill, other than trying to make the University a profit-making corporation? President Herbst responded that it is not unusual that halfway through session a bill gets sprung that is profoundly problematic for the University. Legislators have staff and their work is reflected in the bill. This bill is actually coming from a good place. This senator has been a great friend to the University. He wants to push us. President Herbst told him that for the 7 years she has been here, we have done a lot to advance entrepreneurship and innovation. The information is dispersed on different websites, so we created a document that pulls it together. As evidence of our strength in this area, Peter Werth, a pharmaceutical entrepreneur, gave us $22.5M for entrepreneurship and innovation. This would be a big gift for any university in the country. The gift does not have a lot of direction, because he thinks that we are already doing well on the path. This is terrific for us. We worked with Peter Werth for a couple of years and demonstrated to him that we have the will and spirit to be successful. As previously stated, we will use faculty as needed. But, we need to be really respectful of people who have tried to help us. This sort of situation does happen.

Senator Caira suggested that it would be awesome if something tangible could come from the Metanoia, especially if it was a creative. For example, we could turn the Gampel roof into solar or put solar in one of the parking lots.

President Herbst responded that she is all for it, but it is going to cost a mountain of money. Public private partnerships would be great way to go about this. We need to be able to afford it, without taking money from departments.

Senator Makowsky inquired what progress we are making on addressing salary and equity for women and underrepresented groups. This is a longstanding issue.

President Herbst replied that this is at the level of chairs and deans, and eventually the Provost. When Jeremy Teitelbaum was Dean of CLAS and Provost, he worked on it on a case-by-case basis. When she was department chair of a big department, she knew what cases were gender-problematic. It involves complicated issues of labor economics, which has to do with academic fields and success in publishing. Chairs need to get on this issue. They know the faculty and publishing. It then has to go to deans. Deans and the Provost can make adjustments. When President Herbst was at Northwestern University, she was on a committee that looked into this. It took years and a lot of money. The Northwestern president at the time was a labor economist. At the end of the day, they had to get down to the granular level of departments. They tracked the progress and publishing of males and females who came into departments at the same time. This has to be done with specific cases at the department level. She has seen no empirical evidence that there needs to be a solution at a higher or across-the-board level, but she is open minded, as she is sure Craig Kennedy also is.
Senator Freake posed a question on behalf of the Chair of the Senate Budget Committee, who wanted to know about the financial impact of hiring a new basketball coach and the firing of the previous coach.

President Herbst recused herself from responding because she is the last appeal. Scott Jordan further explained that President Herbst is involved in the NCAA investigation, and is the last appeal for AAUP. The prior coach was in AAUP and their appeal process runs up to the President. There are two elements to the question. The first is ongoing. The new coach is paid less than the old coach. As far as settlements, this is a firing for cause, which is totally different than a negotiated settlement. We do not plan to pay anything. The NCAA runs a formal investigation. It will not be public until they are done. When that comes out, he is happy to talk about it.

Senator Wogenstein asked whether the contract for the new basketball coach includes a clause about would he be paid if he were let go? If so, up to which point? If he has new employment would he still be paid?

President Herbst responded that the contracts are extremely complicated. She will send both contracts to Hedley Freake, who can pass them around. Each coach has different lawyers, so their contracts look different.

President Herbst introduced the new Provost Craig Kennedy. There will be many welcoming parties to get to know him. He is from the University of Georgia, School of Education, where he served as dean.

Provost Kennedy shared some anecdotes from his “first day of school”. He also expressed gratitude for the support provided to him by Jeremy Teitelbaum, who has been an incredible mentor and support. He wanted to publicly acknowledge Dr. Teitelbaum and how incredibly lucky we are to have someone like him at UConn. Provost Kennedy is looking forward to his new role and working together to do a lot for the students.

The slate was presented and will be voted on at the next Senate meeting.

7. Annual Report of Senate Standing Committee

Moderator Seigle described the new approach. Each chair would have three minutes and three slides. Questions would be taken from the floor after all three were finished.

Growth & Development
Scholastic Standards
Student Welfare

Senator Mannheim provided a quick comment on crosswalks. One of most awkward places on campus is across from the Gampel and bookstore. It is hard for students to get across and for cars to travel through. A simple solutions would be to put a circle so that students could cross half way and have a place to stay in the middle of the circle. Senator Barnes-Farrell replied that she will put it on list of things for the committee to talk about.

Senator Kaminsky posed a question for Student Welfare. He asked if they have talked about any issues regarding mental health services from either faculty or students. Senator Wilson replied that they have not this year. They discussed this last year. Counseling & Mental Health Services spoke to them about their range of services.

8. Annual Report on Research

Presented by Radenka Maric, Vice President for Research

Attachment #28

Senator Caira asked about a plan to increase federal funding. Dr. Maric replied that their approach is to increase the number of SBIR and STTR. They want to increase smaller grants. They also want to recruit faculty who can get grants, but these faculty ask for high startup costs. They have looked into how many faculty we have in Storrs that are supposed to be research active, but are not. We have a high number who haven’t received grants for 5 years. We are putting together a mentoring programming to support people in getting grants.

9. New Business

No new business.
Senator Darre made a motion to adjourn at 5:06 p.m. The motion was seconded by Senator Wagner. The motion was accepted by a standing vote of the Senate.

Respectfully Submitted,

Good Afternoon,

The Senate Executive Committee met twice since the last Senate meeting. On March 23, the SEC met with Committee Chairs to review activities and to set the agenda for this meeting.

The Scholastic Standards continues work on the academic calendar and issues of final assessment. We expect to receive proposed by-law changes for our April 30 meeting. They are also working with our colleagues from Education Abroad who are seeking firmer guidelines that underwrite the procedures they are currently using. We can expect to see by-law revisions on this issue, as well.

Several subcommittees continue their respective work including Delta GE, General Education Environmental Literacy Task Force and the Academic Integrity Joint Subcommittee.

The Nominating Committee will present the 2018-2019 proposed committee rosters later in this meeting. The elections for the Nominating Committee and the Senate Executive Committee are currently underway. Expects those results to be announced later this week.

The Faculty Standards Committee is reviewing their report on the SETs one more time. Once it is received by the SEC, it will be presented to the full Senate.

On March 30, the SEC met with senior administration.

- Vice President Gilbert reviewed the schedule of events for Spring Weekend to be held April 19-21. Again, this year, we look forward to a slate of wholesome activities.
- Vice President Holsinger invited all to attend the 3-Minute Thesis presentations at the Student Union Theater on Thursday, April ? at 6:00pm. Eleven students will present in what is sure to be a great competition.
- Assistant Vice President Nathan Fuerst urged everyone to get involved with the Open House event on Saturday, April 14. Offers are out to highly qualified students and we can all play a part in showcasing UConn as their right choice.
- Laura Cruickshank offered a preview of summer construction. Be warned! Driving and parking on campus will be difficult. For details on construction activity, visit uconn.edu/construction
- Vice President Dan Weiner shared that an updated procedure on …. Will be posted in the coming week. This new procedures takes into account the State Department's updated Advisory System – formerly a Travel Warning system.
